The invocation was offered by Bill Boyd, pastor, First United Methodist Church, Temple, as follows:

O God of grace and God of glory, on these your people pour your power. We have gathered here with a common concern for all Texans and their families. Even though we come with different philosophies and political affiliations, we are united in our desire to work for the common good of all Texans, for justice in opportunity of all citizens, for the best education and welfare of all of our children, and for prosperity and security for all within our state. As we deal with our differences, keep us focused on our higher calling to work for that greater good of all.

From generation to generation you have shown us that we can "mount up on wings as eagles" and that we can overcome all challenges through the one who loves us. Send forth your spirit with the breath of life and of vision. Unite us in our work. Help us to work in the spirit, which is centered in love, respect, and highest integrity. Give each of us the wisdom and vision to work for your kingdom here on earth as it is in heaven.

Bless our families and all those who are sacrificing so that we might be able to give this time to the service of our great state. And bless all of those women and men who are serving as military personnel, police officers, firefighters, and other walks of life so that our freedom and security might be protected. All of these things we ask for in your holy name. Amen.

The chair recognized Representative Delisi who led the house in the pledges of allegiance to the United States and Texas flags.
